Eddie Lyons Comedy #2

Eddie's persistency in trying to see his sweetheart, Virginia not only cost him several inches of the Southern portion of his anatomy while Eddie was rushing North, but the rear of his trousers as well. The cause of the said dismemberment of his trousers and anatomy was a strong dislike of Eddie by Virginia's father and his definite instructions to his trained bull dog Zip.

Father had made a fortune in a patent silencer for Fords and Count De Spair, a famous duelist from Italy had his eye on the fortune as well as on Virginia.

Strange to state Eddie and the count were buddies in France and the count owed Eddie his life and when he met Eddie in this country he was only too willing to replay.

Unknown to each other they were both in love with Virginia and when Eddie tells the count that he has a rival, the Count insists on teaching Eddie the surest way to get rid of rivals; killing them, and by the manner that the count handled guns and knives, Eddie little wondered that the count was a first class rival extinguisher.

The only 'out' visible to Eddie and Virginia was eloping, so arrangements were made, but at the critical moment, the count arrived and upon learning that Eddie is his rival, his enthusiasm gets the better of him. Eddie however, misunderstands the count's intentions and beats it as fast as he can. Exhausted, he rushes back to Virginia to die in her arms only to learn when the count arrives that he was merely chasing him to present him with the engagement ring that he had purchased for Virginia.
